

CONTRIBUTORS

JONATHAN BUCHSBAUM is Professor of Media Studies at Queens College, City University of New York. He is the author of Cinema Engagé: Film in the Popular Front (1988) and Cinema and the Sandinistas: Filmmaking in Revolutionary Nicaragua, 1979-1990 (2003). He writes on political filmmaking and the economics of the French film industry and works as a political activist and officer in the union of the CUNY faculty and professional staff.

GÉRARD GRUNBERG is a CNRS Directeur de recherche at the Centre d'études politiques de Sciences-Po (CEVIPOF) and research director at Sciences-Po. He is a specialist in political sociology and has written numerous books and articles analyzing political attitudes and electoral behavior. His published works include Europe at the Polls: The European Elections of 1999 (with Pascal Perrineau and Colette Ysmal; 2002) and La Démocratie à l'épreuve: Une nouvelle approche de l'opinion des Français (with Nonna Mayer and Paul Sniderman; 2002). He has also written several studies of French and European socialism and, with Alain Bergounioux, published L'Ambition et le Remords : Le Parti socialiste français et le pouvoir, 1905-2005 in October 2005. He has been a consultant for several polling organizations and, from 1988 to 1991, was a member of Prime Minister Michel Rocard's cabinet. He currently teaches in the master's program in political sociology at Sciences-Po.

GRAEME HAYES is Principal Lecturer in French at Nottingham Trent University, UK. He is the author of Environmental Protest and the State in France (2002) and coeditor of Cinéma et Engagement (2005).

EDWARD C. KNOX is College Professor Emeritus, Middlebury College. He has published articles and reviews on American writing about France, in particular how postwar GIs, the New York Times, and Americans of the 1990s looked at France. He edited a special issue of French Politics, Culture & Society (21, 2 [Summer 2003]) on American views of France and is currently preparing an overview of American discourse on France, 2000-2005.

LAURENT MARIE lectures in French and Film at University College Dublin. He is the author of Le Cinéma est à nous: Le PCF et le cinéma français de la Libération à nos jours, published in September 2005. Other recent publications include articles in Cinéma et Engagement (2005), Zola and Film: Essays on the Art of Adaptation (2005), Le Populaire à table: Le boire et le manger aux XIX^e et XX^e siècles (2005), and The Francophone Bande Dessinée (2005).

CHARLIE MICHAEL studies film at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, where he focuses on issues of nationalism and cultural identity in French-language cinema. He recently published an article on Québécois documentary in The Velvet Light Trap (Fall 2004) and plans to write a dissertation about globalization, mode of production, and critical controversy in French cinema of the 1980s and 1990s.

MARTIN O'SHAUGHNESSY is a reader in French Cultural Studies at Nottingham Trent University. He is the author of Jean Renoir (2000) and coeditor of Cinéma et Engagement (2005).

JOAN W. SCOTT is Harold F. Linder Professor in the School of Social Science at the Institute for Advanced Study. Among her books are Gender and the Politics of History (1988); Only Paradoxes to Offer: French Feminists and the Rights of Man (1996); and Parité: Sexual Equality and the Crisis of French Universalism (2005). She is now at work on a book, The Politics of the Veil, which will develop the themes set forth in this article.